

BULLER, Kitchener and Roberts in South Africa, to say nothing of the other Generals, are followed, day by day, in these terrifying times, by trained correspondents whose reports are part of the Republic's great daily chronicle. Our own affairs in the Philippines are watched even to minuteness by correspondents and artists. Among the writers who are sending letters to the Sunday Republic from that part of the world is the globe-trotting Frank G. Carpenter—always concise, clear and entertaining.

As to pictures—observe next Sunday's half-tone spread—pages of unequalled newspaper art, "good enough to frame." Don't forget to speak to your dealer about saving a copy for you next Sunday. The demand will make the issue hard to find after noon next Sunday.

PROVED THE MOTIVE FOR THE MURDER.

District Attorney Osborne's Reply to General Molinere's Comment on the Trial.

WILL BE SENTENCED TO-DAY.

Mother of the Condemed Man Visits Him in the Tombs—Preparing to Go to Sing Sing Prison.

NOTICE. On Friday, Feb. 14—Assistant District Attorney James W. Osborne will not be present on Friday when Roland H. Molinere, whom he prosecuted, is sentenced to death by Recorder, Doug. It is probable that Colored Ass't Bird Gardiner will make the formal motion for sentence. Mr. Osborne has left the city for a short vacation.

He started this evening for his old home in Charlotte, N. C., where his mother lives, and where his brother has won distinction as District Attorney. Just before he departed he dictated this statement as reply to the comments made by General Molinere on the trial.

No one could resent any remark made by the grief-stricken father. But, before General Molinere, conscious of his son's guilt, is in no position to judge or comment. He was educated for the bar in New York by Theodore Dwight, the greatest teacher in the world. He told me that all criminal cases the motive is controlling. In this case his love for woman was the motive, and he failed to perceive that she had spied on him.

Molinere spent comparatively little time in his cell in the Tombs today. After he had taken his morning exercise in the exercise viaduct began to pray in, and he was engaged in constant conversation with different persons, with slight interruptions, until nearly 6 o'clock. At last, his arrival with his mother, who said she was satisfied with the farewell words she had spoken the day before.

"I could not stay away from my boy any longer," she said to Warner Hart, "so I just slipped away from him without saying anything to any one and came over."

Molinere expressed great pleasure at seeing his mother. Soon after her departure the members of the orchestra of the Castle Square Opera Company last night rendered a bouquet to Sig. Morello, the conductor, in honor of his birthday. The bouquet was given in the name of the Boston Ballet. Besides the two young members of the orchestra, the Bostonians and the guests Matador, Miss Nellie and Miss Adele, Miss Thomas, Homer and Mrs. Parker, Mr. Gardner, assistant conductor of the orchestra, on behalf of its fellow-members presented to Sig. Morello two small French dancing mirlots. The recipient acknowledged the gift in a happy speech. The health and happiness of the conductor were plauded in beautiful homely diction during the evening.

REND, which will act as a stay of execution, but nothing can save Mulvey from going to Sing Sing.

The worth of preparing the artist will be shown in the trial. The trial included about two and a quarter million of words and the record is likely altered with every page.

It is reported that all the old Infantry Bullets are to be equipped with machine gun batteries, consisting of six guns. These massed batteries on the peace front and thirty-eight on the war. The same equipment will be provided for the frontier posts.
